Ambrose Chapel sits on a hill surrounded by approximately 400 acres of pastures and woodland. The church is bordered on three sides by large pastures and on the fourth side by the Winchester Grade Road. The property is enclosed by wire and wood fences which mark the property boundaries and protect the grounds from grazing cattle.

Within the church grounds are numerous trees. The most striking is a large oak tree which sits at the highest point on the property. The estimated age of the tree is over 200 years. Numerous other hardwoods are located within the boundaries. Several cedar trees are located among the tombstones, with one tree being over 40 feet in height. Late 19th century plantings such as Yucca plants are locate on the grounds along with roses, crape myrtle, and lillies.

Church 1851 Contributing Building

1 ½ story rectangular church with hewn log framing, stone foundation, and metal roof. The southeast entrance is 2 bays with wood siding. The west and east sides of the church are identical with three 6/6 double-hung sash windows and wood siding. The rear, or northwest facade, of the church has two 6/6 double-hung sash original windows, wood siding, and a small 10' x 30" sign reading "Ambrose Chapel." Original shutters exist for the church, but are currently stored inside the building.

The interior of the church has wood plank flooring, the lower 1/3 of the walls are wood paneled while the upper 2/3 of the walls are plaster with traces of paper. The ceiling is tongue and groove pine. The wooden pulpit is centered between the two windows on the northwest facade and is surrounded by a wooden railing. Twenty-two original pews still exist within the church. Wooden light boxes were added above the windows along the west and east walls, but plans call for these to be removed. An original ladder is on the southeast wall for the entrance to the attic. A wooden cross hangs on the northwest wall above the pulpit.

Cemetery Contributing Site

The cemetery is located on approximately one acre of ground. Documentation has over 101 names, with some burials going unmarked or the stone being illegible. Dates of burials range from the mid-19th century to roughly 1920. While some stones are old creek stones that can no longer be read, others are sandstone or marble. Carved designs and symbols include roses, willows, hands pointing up, hands shaking with one finger pointing, doves with branches and gates of heaven.

Ambrose Chapel is a small country church and cemetery dating to the mid-19th century. The building reflects its original construction and materials.

The land for the free meeting house and cemetery was donated in the 1790s, when the church was started by the United Brethren in Christ. The church and cemetery are significant under Criteria A for Military, and Criteria C for Architecture. Ambrose Chapel was used as a parish church during the period of 1851 to 1920.

In 1772, William Henry Ambrose left Frederick County, Maryland, and purchased approximately 400 acres near the forks of Sleepy Creek in what was then Berkeley County, Virginia (now Morgan County, WV). William Henry and his son William Hanby were both early preachers of the United Brethren in Christ Church. They were two of the first 100 licensed or ordained preachers of the United Brethren in Christ faith. In 1789, the first formal conference was founded becoming the first church born on American soil.

In the 1790s William Henry Ambrose divided his land among his children and set aside one acre for a "Free Meeting House" and cemetery. Builders of the church were members of the United Brethren faith, but the church was free for use by all who preached the gospel of Jesus Christ. Circuit riders from the Albrights, United Brethren in Christ, and Methodists preached at Ambrose Chapel one of the early rural churches in the area.

During the early to mid-1800s Ambrose Chapel became strictly a Methodist Church. In 1845, Mathias Ambrose, jr., grandson of William Henry Ambrose, and Issac Michael in partnership purchased the original 400 acres previously owned by William Henry Ambrose (deceased), and then divided it. With this division Issac Michael deeded another small parcel of land, adjacent to the original acre, to the Methodist Episcopal Church and trustees.

In 1851, a new church was erected at a cost of $287.30 in cash and generous donations of materials and labor. The church has a two door facade, which is different from other churches in Morgan county. However, this style was popular in both Methodist, and United Brethren denominations and may be similar to the previous church. The interior has plaster walls and a tongue and groove pine ceiling. There is a circular chandelier in the center of the room with a star in its center.

Burials in the cemetery date from roughly 1839 to 1950s. Among the cemetery are the names of many of the early trustees, and church members including the Ambrose family. While some of the stones appear to be creek stones and are hard to read; some have very fine workmanship. These headstones are sandstone and marble and have designs often in reset circles, of roses, doves, heavenly gates, willows, and a variety of hands shaking (which symbolize devotion), and hands pointing the way to heaven. The cemetery is laid out in rows with the bodies laid out behind the stones. Many plots do have small plain foot stones.

The church was used during the Civil War as a military hospital for Confederate soldiers. As cited in WARM SPRING ECHOS, and other books for the Bath Campaign, Stonewall Jackson marched his troops past the chapel while on the move from Winchester to Berkeley Springs and used the church as a military hospital for the wounded. Skirmishes had occurred nearby in and around Berkeley Springs and Hancock, Maryland, near New Years 1862. On his way to Romney, Stonewall Jackson's men marched from Berkeley Springs to Unger's Store at a nearby crossroads where they camped for a time.

Summary:

Ambrose Chapel is a rural county church in Morgan County which has been unchanged over time. The frame building construction represents the period of the 1850s. The building served the community as a short term military hospital during the Civil War during local fighting. The cemetery was established by the 1830s, and served the community.
